Key Business Needs

The bank was looking for a product to elevate the user experience for its accounts payable customers. Market research indicated there was an opportunity to decrease operations cost. This offering from the treasury division was considered to be a cost centre traditionally but the bank wanted a complete revamp to move towards profitability.

Key challenges the bank encountered were:

High operations cost and no self-support system

The bank's existing system had an inadequate operations model and there was no self-support system in place for the large corporate clients and its suppliers.

Low platform adoption rate

The bank was struggling with a very low platform adoption rate due to poor user experience, long and inefficient onboarding process and no promotional campaigns

Long processing time

The corporate client's suppliers were constantly complaining about the processing time. This was due to unavailability of supplier database and options of multiple digital payment rails.

Incedo Solution

Incedo solved the bank's issues with two different approaches. We deployed our payments platform IncedoPay as a SaaS Solution for the bank along with managed services for campaigning.

Incedo deployed its payment infrastructure services to digitize and improve the process and activated use of data for decision making which led to areas of improvement to generate upsell and cross-sell opportunities.

Campaigns were launched to promote platform adoption and smooth onboarding process to vendors. This also addressed the issues related to processing time.

using IncedoPay – the end-to-end corporate payments solution. IncedoPay brought together the bank, its clients and the client's payees on the same platform. This SaaS based platform was cost effective and came with a self-support system. Modular architecture approach was adopted for optimum platform implementation and seamless integration with the bank's payments ecosystem.
